Miami Exposé, a Portrait of Miami Art Exhibit is Looking for Models

Miami, Florida, September 25, 2008 – Local artist, Louis Dalmau extends an invitation to all Miami residents to become part of this history-making art event by joining him on Saturday, October 4th, 2008 at his art studio at 6900 Biscayne Boulevard between the hours of 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. to have their likeness captured for the project, Miami Exposé, a portrait of Miami. Participants will enjoy a festive day filled with life entertainment and various opportunities to win prizes throughout the day as they wait for their chance to form part of the art project.

Miami Exposé, a portrait of Miami will be the artist's interpretation of Miami, of the fiber that weaves through the streets of this dynamic multi-cultural city. What makes this project unique is its interactivity between the art medium, the artist and the people of this diverse city. Folks from all walks of life, from all cultures and ages are invited to share in the creativity in bringing Miami Exposé to life. "I don't consider Miami Exposé as my art project, it belongs to the citizens of Miami, I am merely the channel entrusted to bring it to life", said Dalmau.

With the full support and encouragement of the MiMo Biscayne Association, the preview for this first of its kind art project will exhibit on Biscayne Boulevard between 69th and 73rd Streets during this year's festivities surrounding the Art Basel™ events. Once the full project is completed in December 2009, it will expand from 50th Street all the way down the Biscayne Boulevard Corridor to 77th Street and will consist of 216 canvases measuring 8-feet by 3-feet each with eight different facial renderings for a total of 1728 expressions, a mere sampling of our diversified community.
